Robert has an entertaining flair for literature. He is well known for both writing and speaking to expose the historic relevance of events or places. His frequent book reviews in The Canberra Times' Panorama magazine, with the possibility of 100,000 readers, makes for big demands!

There is much to share of the skills needed to have success in publication, to choose subjects that will arrest attention, and to use presentation styles that will be sure to arouse the desire to read more and perhaps even to stimulate writing.

Good speakers are a draw-card wherever they go, indicated by return invitations to Probus Clubs and Churches. He lived in Berridale many years ago.
